

Good morning-

I spoke to a company we use frequently.

They are estimating a budget range of $12K–$15K for this project, but the final cost could be lower depending on a few factors:

- Will they be able to import the current content, or will it need to be manually transferred? (Access to the existing site would help reduce costs.)
- Do you just need the framework built, with content input on your end? In other words, they create the shell, you input the data.
- Do you have photography available for them to use?
- They also have optional features that could be added, such as alert bars, modal alerts for emergencies, and multi-lingual support.

Not only would this update make the site more inviting, but it would also provide you with a strong set of tools to keep it up to date.

Let me know your thoughts, and I look forward to your response.
